

CONNECTIONS

ST. EDWARD'S UNIVERSITY

President's Report 2005–2006

Culture links us together.
Technology brings us closer.
But it's people who connect.

At this pivotal moment in St. Edward's University history, the connections between our students, faculty, staff, alumni and friends are more important than ever. As we continue with our careful plans for growth, we've gone to great lengths to nourish the intimate links that keep people anchored to this place.

We've preserved the warmth of our singular campus while establishing new buildings like the John Brooks Williams Natural Sciences Center–North Building. We've maintained our ideal student-teacher ratio by adding new faculty to accommodate the controlled growth of our student population. And we've encouraged our alumni programs to flourish at locations well beyond the Hilltop. The spirit of St. Edward's and its Holy Cross mission thrive in places from Los Angeles to Miami, forming a vast network of alumni intertwined with a common sense of purpose. The work and commitment of these dedicated alumni and friends have provided the support that has helped us surpass the goal of A Special Destiny: The Campaign for St. Edward's University months ahead of schedule.

Through the links like the ones you'll read about on the following pages, the St. Edward's community remains vibrant in the hearts of those who have climbed its hilltop.

R. GRIFFIN LORD

Griff Lord isn't much interested in the limelight. But his generous support of scholarships at St. Edward's University deserves some fanfare. Since creating the R. Griffin Lord Family Endowed Scholarship in 1996, he has built the endowment to more than $700,000 through personal gifts made with his wife, Kathy, and through gifts from the Grogan Lord Foundation, which was established by his father. Over the years, the scholarship has helped more than 70 students who might not otherwise have been able to go to college make their St. Edward's education affordable. For Lord, that's what the university's Holy Cross mission is all about. "My hope for the students at St. Edward's — recipients of our scholarship or not — is that they come out of their college experience with more than a textbook education," he says. "That way, they can find happiness in what they do and a passion for what they do."

Following decades-long careers in commercial radio and telecommunications, Wendell Mayes Jr., '02, MLA '05, MBA '06, and Dave Hughart, MLA '05, found themselves looking for something meaningful to occupy their spare time. The answer came in the form of a broad-based graduate program, the Master of Liberal Arts at St. Edward's University. As Hughart puts it, "It seemed like a better idea than just playing golf."

While both Mayes and Hughart had significant technical backgrounds, they both found a home in the MLA program. Pursuing their MLAs encouraged them to broaden their outlooks on life and the world. Hughart analyzed the community impact of high net worth individuals making Austin their home after years of wandering, and Mayes wrote of his days as a sailor during World War II.

Following his graduation in 2006, Mayes — recently invited to join the New College Advisory Board — created an endowed scholarship for current New College students, including MLA students. Hughart, who sits on the MLA Board of Advisors as well as the Alumni Association Board of Directors, also contributed to support a New College scholarship and provided funds to assist MLA students with special project expenses. Both men also gave to the John Brooks Williams Natural Sciences Center—North Building. "I have received a lot of help along the way," says Hughart, "both in my college and professional careers. I feel an obligation to help others now."

Mayes and Hughart's combined giving to St. Edward's totals more than $136,000. Mayes sums up the motivation behind their giving: "A college education is important to people of all ages."

WELLS FARGO

Wells Fargo Regional President Don Kendrick Jr. hadn't been in town long when his senior vice president, J. Hollis Bone, '93, introduced him to St. Edward's President George E. Martin. Kendrick was so impressed, he pushed along the bank's $75,000 commitment for construction of the John Brooks Williams Natural Sciences Center—North Building to be paid in full by December 2005, completing payment in two years rather than the originally planned five. Kendrick also facilitated a meeting between Raul Lomeli-Azoubel, director of Diverse Growth Segments at Wells Fargo, and Esther Yacono, director of the College Assistance Migrant Program at St. Edward's, to discuss continuing the bank's support of scholarships for CAMP. "St. Edward's does a great job in and beyond the Austin community and we look forward to an ongoing relationship with the university," says Kendrick. "Education is one of our core areas of philanthropy."

25 YEARS OF THE ST. EDWARD'S ASSOCIATES

It all started in 1981. Thirty-two members of the St. Edward's community gathered together and agreed to donate $1,000 annually to support the university. Over the past two decades, the St. Edward's Associates have continued to give, their ranks swelling to more than 350 members who represent every aspect of the university, from alumni and parents to faculty and friends.

Celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, the group — now known as President's Associates with a name change this year — continues to have a tremendous impact at the university. On average, associates contribute one-third of the total yearly goal for The St. Edward's Fund. These gifts provide academic scholarships for deserving students, training and professional development for faculty members, and unrestricted funds to meet a variety of university needs. With such integral support,

St. Edward's University is able to continue its mission and achieve its goals.

As a personal thank you from the St. Edward's community, associates are recognized in the annual Honor Roll of Donors and invited each year to a special reception with President George E. Martin. Look for the next such event at Homecoming 2007.

Since the start of the fiscal 2006-2007 year, St. Edward's has recognized four levels of giving among President's Associates:

- Platinum: $25,000 or more
- Gold: $10,000 to $25,000
- Silver: $5,000 to $10,000
- Bronze: $1,000 to $5,000

HOUSTON | Patricia Hayes and her parents

When their daughter, Patricia Hayes, '04, enrolled at St. Edward's, Michael Hayes and Maria Melo liked the idea of the individual attention she would get. But they admit to being concerned that a small school would provide less opportunity. They soon discovered that perception was unfounded.

Patricia arrived at St. Edward's on a soccer scholarship as a Political Science major. She switched to Biology before the end of her freshman year and was already conducting research on bacteria as a sophomore. By the time her work placed second in a Texas Academy of Science competition, Patricia had set her sights on medical school. Her parents watched with pride as their daughter spoke at the ground-breaking of the John Brooks Williams Natural Sciences Center–North Building in October 2004. And when she graduated, they gave more than $50,000 in cash and donated computer equipment to the facility.

“When I saw the new Natural Sciences center in May, I was very impressed with the effective use of funds and the quality of the construction,” says Michael. “The new center is modern and functional without being extravagant.”

Patricia, now in her second year at the UT–Health Science Center at Houston Medical School, says the chance to collaborate with peers and professors helped motivate her to pursue a medical degree. Already, that opportunity has paid off in unexpected dividends: Patricia was one of two students chosen for a UTHSC research program in Cuernavaca, Mexico, last summer to study genes that make people susceptible to gastrointestinal diseases. Her undergraduate research made her a shoo-in for the project.

“That's one of the things that's so special about St. Edward's — no matter how much effort you put in, it comes back ten times over,” she says. “My parents want other students to have an even better experience than I did.”

MICHAEL HAYES AND MARIA MELO

Students attending classes in the John Brooks Williams Natural Sciences Center–North Building this fall are taking advantage of top-notch technology, including nine microtower computers with 17-inch flat-screen monitors and four digital cameras. All thanks to Maria Melo and Michael Hayes, parents of Patricia Hayes, '04.

Last year, when Melo's employer, Hewlett-Packard, began matching employee contributions with an equivalent amount of HP equipment, Melo and her husband saw an opportunity for the School of Natural Sciences. “I wanted students to be able to use a variety of equipment to help with their research,” says Melo. “The purpose of our gift was to maximize the benefits for them.”

With a long history of supporting programs to improve Texas K–12 schools, the Sid Richardson Foundation seemed like the perfect fit for a new program created by dean of the School of Education at St. Edward's University Karen Jenlink. St. Edward's program officer at the foundation, executive vice president Val Wilkie, agreed.

That's why Wilkie recommended funding the 2+2+2 Model for Teacher Recruitment to the foundation's board. The board agreed to donate $120,000 over two years to the program Jenlink created to encourage high-performing minority students to become teachers. When it goes into effect June 1, 2007 after a year-long planning phase, the program will recruit juniors and seniors in the Austin Independent School District and pipeline them to Austin Community College. Once the students complete two years of introductory course work, they'll move on to advanced study and teacher certification courses at St. Edward's. The foundation's funding will help St. Edward's design the program and begin to implement it.

When Wilkie read Jenlink's proposal a few short months after she visited him at his office in Ft. Worth, he says it sounded "made-to-order" for the foundation's goals. "Our attention has been focused on attracting more capable teachers to come into public schools and changing how the teachers work once there," he says. "We also want to bring more minority groups into teaching, and there's no question St. Edward's has spent a lot of effort working in minority communities."

But to take a chance on a program that was only an idea at the time? Wilkie says foundations exist to take such risks. And besides, he says, working with Jenlink hardly seemed like a gamble. "I'm a people person," he says. "And it comes down to betting on the people who are going to be involved in the program. I have a good feeling Karen can make this program happen."

KEVIN J. KOCH

When it came time to choose a college, Kevin J. Koch, '80, MBA '84, picked St. Edward's, where his father, retired Professor of Economics Jim Koch, started teaching in 1960. Now he gives students at Yoe High School in Cameron a connection of their own to the university. Kevin, a vice president at Temple-based McLane Company, is also a trustee at The Callaway Foundation, created by his friends the late J.L. and Bonnelle Callaway. Before J.L. passed away, he asked Kevin to create and serve as sole trustee of The Callaway Foundation, which provides every graduate from Yoe the opportunity to earn a scholarship. The third- and fourth-place graduates can choose to attend St. Edward's with a full-ride scholarship created through a $475,000 endowment. In September, Koch began a new phase in his relationship with St. Edward's as a member of the university's Board of Trustees.

CHARLES AND CATHERINE SCHULZE

The relationship between Trustee Emeritus Charles Schulze, '33, and St. Edward's spanned nearly seven decades. His wife Catherine continued that partnership through financial gifts to the university after Charles passed away in 2003. The St. Edward's approach to Catholic education so impressed Catherine that she left an unrestricted estate bequest worth over $400,000 when she died in 2005. The executor of her estate was her nephew, Dan O'Connell, a 1974 graduate of St. Edward's. The St. Edward's Board of Trustees allocated the gift to the university's most pressing priorities: capital projects such as the renovation of Fleck Hall, as well as the unrestricted endowment for financial aid and scholarship support.

FRANK HEYDE

After attending both a San Antonio alumni chapter event at the home of Marilyn, '74, and Kevin, '72, O'Neill and his 50-year reunion, Frank Heyde, '56, capped off his reconnection to St. Edward's in style — he walked the procession with other 50th-anniversary class members at graduation this past May and invited his grandson to watch from the audience. This return to campus inspired Heyde, a propellant expert for the U.S. Air Force, to contribute $1,000 to The St. Edward's Fund. Shortly before the reunion, Heyde was diagnosed with leukemia. His classmates immediately stepped in with professional medical advice, daily rides to the hospital for Heyde's wife, Peggy, and other offers of support before Heyde passed away in September. Now these classmates are honoring Heyde with memorial contributions to St. Edward's in his name. "Our class came to St. Edward's from all over the country," Heyde said shortly before he passed away. "Fifty years later, we're still close."

At a party a couple of years ago, Marilyn O’Neill, ’74, ran into the man who served as financial aid director during her years at St. Edward’s. When she thanked him for helping her obtain a scholarship, grant and on-campus job so that she could attend the university, he apologized and said he’d lost track of all the students he’d aided. O’Neill says she hopes her memory will be similarly overcrowded someday — with all the scholars her Real Estate Affinity Program aims to help.

A real estate agent with Keller Williams, O’Neill and her husband Kevin, ’72, created the program to fund The Christopher James Berry Endowed Scholarship, established in the name of their nephew. It’s a simple concept: When interested homebuyers or sellers call her in search of an agent, she gives them a referral in their locale. Then, O’Neill contributes the referral fee she earns to the scholarship.

“I wanted to help my industry, and I wanted to help people who had a connection to St. Edward’s,” she says. “It’s about all parties involved in this being a winner.”

O’Neill is a devoted alumna, volunteering at recruiting events for high school seniors and serving on the Alumni Association Board of Directors from 1994 to 1999, including a role as board chair from 1998 to 1999. She gladly joined the Board of Trustees when the university invited her in 2005, and she and Kevin also have spearheaded efforts to enliven the San Antonio alumni chapter.

“We have a lot of young grads now, and we’re seeing more participation over and over on a consistent basis,” she says. “It’s only a matter of time before the programs we have coming up will really set us apart as a chapter.”

Distant cousins Ruben Cardenas, hs '47, '51, and Arturo Guerra Jr. director of the South Texas Higher Education Foundation, have more than blood in common. They both believe in the power of education and in St. Edward's University.

For Guerra, St. Edward's has become more than the alma mater of his father, Arturo Guerra Sr., hs '28, '32. Since 2004, the university has been one of the places where he directs scholarship funding through the foundation, in partnership with COSTEP, the Council for South Texas Economic Progress, a nonprofit organization that provides free resources for college-bound students across Texas, focusing on Central and South Texas. "It's really about creating another avenue for financial aid offices to help students without a lot of red tape and restrictions," says Patricia Beard, president of COSTEP.

The South Texas Higher Education Foundation, an Edinburg-based nonprofit corporation, was formed in September 1999 to provide cash donations to colleges and universities across South Texas and to 501(c) (3) organizations dedicated to education. "We look at where the kids are going to school and where the need is, and we try to meet it," says Guerra. "We don't put any red tape around the funds either; we leave it up to the school to distribute the money. What we're doing here is incredibly simple, but it's incredibly important in positioning students to get their degrees, improving their chances of landing higher-paying jobs and worthwhile careers."

In March, Cardenas invited Guerra to a university reception they held at his McAllen law office. After speaking with President George E. Martin and other staff members from the university's Office of Student Financial Services, Guerra decided to renew a $20,000 gift to the university from the foundation.

This isn't the first time Cardenas has promoted St. Edward's to the South Texas community. He and his wife Dardanella (a trustee from 1980–1985) helped create a $25,000 College Assistance Migrant Program scholarship in 2003 through matching funds from the former SBC Communications, now AT&T, where he previously served on the board of directors. Through more events aimed at enhancing St. Edward's in the area, Cardenas hopes to encourage aid to St. Edward's and its students.

"I'm continually grateful for the opportunities that St. Edward's gave me as a student. I just hope we can continue to pass that on to others," says Cardenas, named Distinguished Alumnus in 1976. "The best gift you can give someone is an education."

LOS ANGELES

Brother William Nick, CSC

Though the number of Holy Cross religious in education has dwindled in recent years, the schools they founded and fostered continue to thrive. Brother William Nick, CSC, '64, president of Notre Dame High School in Sherman Oaks, Calif., took steps to help assure that tradition continues when he convinced his school's board of directors to pledge $25,000 to the Holy Cross Institute at St. Edward's University.

In truth, "convinced" isn't the right word. Brother Bill says getting the board to give to a resource created to educate lay and religious teachers alike in the Holy Cross tradition was "an easy sell."

"The board at Notre Dame High School believes in the Holy Cross mission," says Brother Bill. "The fact that the institute is housed at St. Edward's just strengthened a connection already well established."

Having worked at five high schools in his 45 years as a Holy Cross Brother, Brother Bill (who currently serves St. Edward's as a member of the Alumni Association Board of Directors and is a former trustee) wants to ensure that the heritage to which he's devoted his life stays vital. And for him, that tradition extends beyond education.

"The Holy Cross educational mission is a beacon of hope for countries all over the world," he says. "The institute can be a resource for providing this hope and for helping schools continue to carry on the tradition. People will feel individually supported and part of a community. This will light the spiritual way for others and help the world become a more peaceful, more just place."

AN ANCHOR IN HOLY CROSS

Kevin Makley has served 21 years as an administrator, teacher and counselor at St. Francis High School in Mountain View, Calif. — 10 of those as president, his most recent post. For him, Holy Cross is a tradition worth preserving. That's why he facilitated a $50,000 gift from St. Francis High School to the Holy Cross Institute. "We know the importance of carrying on this legacy and that the Holy Cross Institute at St. Edward's is the best possible means to achieve this goal," he says. "It is clearly part of our mission to insure that Father Basil Moreau's vision of Catholic education is always available to students in the Silicon Valley. Our board of directors knows the importance of Holy Cross, and like me, they want to protect and proclaim this salient educational philosophy."

Considering how St. Edward's practically runs in his family, Joseph Lucci III, '80, knows a good dean for the university when he sees one. So when Lucci — the nephew of John, '52, and Anthony Lucci, '53 and son-in-law of Leonides Cigarroa, '44 — says he's impressed with new School of Natural Sciences dean Charlie Bicak, he speaks from years of collective experience.

After serving as chair of the School of Natural Sciences Advisory Board through a two-year transition that included constructing the first of two science facilities and searching for a new dean, Lucci says he's been increasingly impressed with Bicak, who came to St. Edward's in July 2005.

Lucci says Bicak's "grounded" approach to leadership and thoughtful management style made a huge difference in avoiding potential tumult. "Charlie listens and builds consensus," says Lucci, a physician and director of the Division of Gynecologic Oncology at the University of Miami Sylvester Cancer Center. "We have worked together to identify ways to improve the educational experiences for students at St. Edward's."

Bicak's work prompted Lucci to double his gift to the school from $50,000 to $100,000. Lucci also encouraged alumnus and fellow Miami resident Wilfredo Braceras, '67, to join the President's Associates. "The willingness of Dean Bicak and the university to involve alumni in the future direction of the school has encouraged many of us to get involved and stay involved," says Lucci.

HENRY CURRAN

From the 1950s to the mid-1960s, Henry Curran worked at St. Edward's as a mathematics and pre-engineering professor, a facilities manager, and a Brother of Holy Cross. In 1965, he transferred to the Mechanical Engineering Department at the Catholic University of America. Concerned over his mother's health, he left the brothers in 1966. In 1972, he left CUA to work as a consultant to U.S. government agencies until retiring to Florida in 1982. And though he hasn't returned to the campus he helped shape since the late 1970s, he's kept in touch with the brothers. When deciding on the best place to make a deferred gift of $300,000, St. Edward's was the only choice he considered. "I spent 16 years there, so it just seemed appropriate." Even more fittingly, he made the gift in the name of the Brothers of Holy Cross.

EVANSVILLE | Randy Miller

Randy Miller, '67

St. Edward's has Alumni Association chapters in every major Texas city, Washington, D.C., Miami, Los Angeles and ... Evansville, Ind.?

It seems improbable that a 30-member alumni chapter for a small university half a nation away would develop in this area. That is, until you consider the reach of Holy Cross. The handful of Holy Cross Brothers who taught at Reitz Memorial High School in Evansville inspired several graduates to make the trek to Texas to attend St. Edward's. Randy Miller, '67, was among them. Miller estimates that at least 10 of his high school classmates went to St. Edward's with him. By the time they came home, all were thankful they had made the trip.

"St. Edward's had excellent teachers who really prepared us for our careers," says Miller. "They were always available and really into mentoring. They provided a foundation that was instrumental."

A few years ago, the idea to assemble started to circulate among the local graduates of St. Edward's — now community leaders in Evansville. Miller, who is president, CEO and founder of South Western Communications, arranged a meeting at a club he belongs to, the Kennel Club. The group has held events there ever since. Though Miller humbly describes these gatherings as low-key, they've consistently drawn visiting faculty and staff from St. Edward's, including President George E. Martin on two occasions. Now, with several Evansville alumni celebrating their upcoming 40-year class reunions, Miller and his classmates have agreed to go the next step.

"We're working on events to tout the successes of St. Edward's and convince elite students from the two Catholic high schools here to go down to Texas," says Miller. "There are fewer brothers at both places, but the tradition continues to be passed down. It's a partnership that continues to evolve."

Even when you start with St. Edward's University, there's not much Rich Ries, '57, and Jeremías Alvarez, '01, would seem to have in common. Only a handful of Hispanics started college with Ries in his freshman class; in Alvarez's day, he was but one Latino among hundreds who share his heritage. Take into account a more-than-40-year age gap and widely different geographic backgrounds (Ries: Minnesota; Alvarez: Texas) and it's even more impressive the two have clicked so well as leaders of St. Edward's Washington, D.C. alumni chapter.

"Once we got started with planning together, it seemed as if Jeremías was one of my former classmates," says Ries, who recently retired from a 36-year career with the Division of International Programs at the National Science Foundation. "The more we talked and learned a little about our personal lives, the more it became obvious that we had lots of similarities that I attribute to our common experience at St. Edward's."

Among their common interests: a desire to get D.C. alumni more actively involved. Ries, who serves as a member of the St. Edward's University Alumni Association Board and played an integral role with first chapter president Brendan McCauley, '93, in getting the D.C. chapter started several years ago, appreciates the new vitality Alvarez has brought to the group since becoming its president in Spring 2006. The two have ambitious plans to reenergize and reconnect local alumni with a diverse set of events like "Night at the Ballpark" outings, a regular happy hour, and visits from St. Edward's faculty and staff to share career advice and speak on politically focused topics. But it's the community service projects they have in the works that both men believe are the ticket to bringing alumni back again and again.

"The student experience is so centered around service and volunteering; it's a component that's ingrained into you," says Alvarez, a social science analyst in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. "That makes attending chapter events like community service projects an easy way to make the student-to-alumni transition."

CAMPAIGN UPDATE

Through your support, St. Edward's University has exceeded its goal for A Special Destiny: The Campaign for St. Edward's University nearly a year ahead of schedule.

Campaign fundraising now surpasses $66 million, and the momentum hasn't stopped. With a new chapel still to fund, the university continues to generate enthusiasm in Central Texas and beyond as alumni and friends have made gifts and encouraged others to do the same before the campaign wraps up on June 30, 2007.

The influx of interest has broken several fundraising records for St. Edward's.

- More than 8,700 people have given to the campaign.
- More than 155 benefactors have committed gifts of $25,000 or more.
- The number of President's Associates who annually give $1,000 or more has reached its highest level — more than 350 members.
- Endowment has grown to almost $55 million.

The addition of the John Brooks Williams Natural Sciences Center–North Building (below) to campus marked a milestone in the campaign, and we now look ahead to our final priority: a new chapel.

Architect Rick Joy's goal is to create a space that is "calming, serene and quiet, where the mind and body unconsciously slow, perceptions shift, and a sensory 'tuning in' occurs." To accomplish that, he is collaborating with an expert from Norway to integrate natural light into the building. He also plans to emphasize water, a poignant religious symbol, both inside and out. And he'll juxtapose the inner sanctuary with an outdoor one including quiet tree-covered nooks. The new chapel's usefulness to campus will extend beyond worship. Along with office space for Campus Ministry and other administrative needs, the building will serve as home base for the Holy Cross Institute.
